

Monologue on LANGUAGE

You are going to give a talk about LANGUAGE.	The text of the monologue	Vocabulary, Grammar Structures, Linking Words and Phrases
Step 1. Introduction 1. Start with a hook sentence that will attract the listener's attention (a quote, a proverb, etc.). 2. Lead your speech steadily to the main part of your talk. 3. The introduction may consist of 3-6 sentences.
Step 2. Learning Languages 2.1 Speak about the reasons for learning foreign languages.	Learning foreign languages has become increasingly important in today's interconnected world. There are numerous reasons why one might choose to start learning of language learning. Firstly, catch on foreign language allows to develop relationships with people from other countries . In a globalized society, being able to converse in a language other than your mother tongue opens up channels for understanding and building relationships. Language helps to give a broad understanding culture of different countries Secondly, learning a foreign language enhances cognitive abilities. Numerous studies have demonstrated that multilingual individuals exhibit improved problem-solving skills, mental flexibility, and even delayed onset of age-related cognitive decline. Language learning requires discipline and mental agility, which in turn stimulate brain growth and improve overall cognitive function.	foreign language(4) mother tongue grammar pronunciation spelling pick up communicate in a foreign language to develop relationships with people from other countries catch on to take up a new language to give a broad understanding culture to pick up the basics of a language to become fluent in a language Firstly Secondly I believe that At the same time
2.2 What sort of people do you think make the best language learners? Which aspects of English (listening, reading, grammar, vocabulary, etc.) do you find the	I believe that to take up a new language, a person must have a need and a predisposition to learn foreign languages.	Learning foreign languages has become

most difficult?	If a person has a need to learn a foreign language, let's say it is necessary to move up the career ladder or a person is going to leave for another country, then he will have more motivation to learn an alien language compared to a person for whom foreign languages are a hobby. At the same time, we must not forget about predisposition. Some people pick up foreign languages, and for some communicate in a foreign language is very hard. This is one of the decisive factors for learning foreign languages. As a rule to pick up the basics of a language is pretty easy, but to become fluent in a language you need spend a lot of time and effort. There are many aspects of the English language: listening, reading, grammar, vocabulary, pronunciation, spelling, etc. For me personally, vocabulary is the most difficult, because you have to memorize a lot of words, while having a good vocabulary it is much easier to deal with other aspects	increasingly important in today's interconnected world If a person has a need to learn a foreign language, let's say it is necessary to move up the career ladder or a person is going to leave for another country, then he will have more motivation to learn an alien language compared to a person for whom foreign languages are a hobby. I believe that to take up a new language, a person must have a need and a predisposition to learn foreign languages.
Step 3. The future of English 3.1 Speak about the benefits of knowing English in contrast with other foreign languages.	English has undoubtedly become the official language of the modern world. For example English is the working language of the United Nations. Its global significance and prevalence offer a wide array of benefits for individuals who have mastered the language. For instance, English proficiency opens up a wealth of educational opportunities. Many of the world's top universities teach in English, and being able to communicate effectively in the language is often a prerequisite for admission. Additionally, English is the language of international academic publications, allowing English-speaking individuals to access a vast range of research and knowledge. Moreover, English is the language of international business and commerce. The majority of multinational corporations operate using English as the primary means of communication. Having a strong command of English can significantly expand career prospects and facilitate lucrative international business ventures.	official language is the lingua franca of computing is the working language of the United Nations dialect to be prominent in international business For instance Moreover Despite Well so For example However, Chinese has the potential to become a global language

3.2 What language do you think may become a global language in future?	And do not forget that English is the lingua franca of computing. While English currently holds the status of a global language, it is difficult to predict with certainty which language may rise to prominence in the future. However, Chinese has the potential to become a global language. The most popular dialect of Chinese is Mandarin Well, China is prominent in international business, so Mandarin Chinese is becoming increasingly relevant as a language for international communication and business. The sheer number of Mandarin speakers worldwide gives the language significant weight and potential for future prominence. Despite the uncertainty of the future, it is essential for individuals to recognize the value of language learning beyond English and be open to embracing the languages and cultures that shape our world.
Step 4. CREATIVE THINKING Introduce your own extra idea(s) on the topic that hasn't/haven't been mentioned before. Justify your choice.
Step 5. Conclusion Summarise the ideas of steps 2, 3, 4.		