

Essay on topic:
«What are the main causes of rising cyber-stalking?»

I would like to talk about such a new but rapidly growing type of crime as cyberstalking. Turning to various statistics, we can see that over the past few years the number of cybercrimes has increased significantly, including crimes related to cyberstalking. Cyberstalking is a form of harassment that is carried out through the Internet or digital technologies. In this essay, we will consider such factors as: increased access to technology, anonymity on the Internet and the lack of an up-to-date legal component.

Perhaps the most important factor influencing the spread of cybercrime has been the availability of technology. Today, literally anyone can easily access the Internet and social networks. It is also worth noting that social networks have become a part of people's lives, as a result of which people can publish a lot of personal information and details of their lives to the public, which greatly facilitates the task for cyberstalkers. As a result: on the one hand, the victims themselves willingly share personal information with Internet users, on the other hand, in order to become an Internet user, there is practically no cost required.

In addition, the actions of cyberstalkers are affected by anonymity on the Internet. In real life, even if the perpetrator hides his real name, he can still be recognized by his appearance and other characteristic features. It is very easy to impersonate another person on the Internet, which complicates the process of finding criminals and reduces their risks.

Besides, the lack of an effective legal framework exacerbates the problem. Since cybercrimes have appeared quite recently, there is still no time-tested set of laws and penalties. Together with anonymity on the Internet, this allows criminals to avoid punishment much more effectively.

In conclusion, the rise in cyberstalking is a complex issue driven by a combination of factors. Increased technological access, the anonymity of the internet, and lack of legal frameworks all play significant roles in creating an environment conducive to this harmful behavior.
